THUE "HAY, MARCH 21, 1989->

GEN. HARRISON'S LETTER TO MR. DENNY. THE INFLUENCE OF THE EXECUTIVE UPON LEGISLATION.

The sensuth proposition laid down in this ad-Mulble Ruer, the distinguished author down des ns by no means least in importance, among those purity and simplicity, the President "should not suffer the Executive Department of the Govbut leave the whole business of making the laws for the Union to be done by the Department, to which the Constitution has exclusively assigned voutive may be heard."

This proposition cannot be better gustained, in so short a space, than by the author of the let- would be of great permutary advantage to owitter himself, whose remarks therefore we append.

"A community of power in the preparation of the laws between the Legislature and the Executive departments, must necessarily lead to dangerous commutations, and greatly to the advantage of a President desirous of extending his power. Such a construction of the constitution could never have been contemplated by those who framed it, as they well knew that those who propose the bills, will always "take core of. themselves, or the interest of their constituents. and hence the provision in the constitution, borrowed from that of England, restricting the originating of revenue bills to the immediate rop- establishments are what is now wanted; they rementatives of the people. So far from agree-ing in opinion with the distinguished character who lately retired from the Presidency, that Congress should have applied to him for a project of a banking system, I think that such an application would have manifested not only exat subserviency upon the part of the body, but an unpardonable ignorance of the chief dan ger to be appichended from such an institution. The danger unquestionably consists in an union of interests between the Execution and the Book. Would an ambitious incumbent of the Executive chair neglect so favorable an opportunity as the preparing of the law would give bris to in-rt in its provisions to secure his in-Quence over it! In the authority given to the Prosident by the constitution "to recommend to Congress such measures as he shall judge nececcary and expedient," it was certainly never intended that the measures he recommended should be presented in a shape suited for the endiate decision of the Legislature. The sages who made the constitution, too well knew the advantages which the Crown of England derived from the exercise of his power by its Ministers, to have intended it to be used by our chief magistrate, or the heads of department un-der his control. The boasted principle of the English constitution that the consent of the er of three Justices to accomplish, however democratic branch of the government was not only necessary to receive money from the people, but that it was its unavoidable prerogative atso to ariginate all the bills for that purpose. 18 1 time in theory as in the letter, but rendered utterly false and nugatory in effect, by the participation of the ministers of the crown in the deinth of be ministion. Indeed the influence they the house of the House of Commons, and from wielding the immense patroungs of the crown (constitutional or usurped) gives the ... a power over that body, that renders plausable at least the base flattery, or as it is more probable, the intended sarcasm of Sir Wal- especially of the eastern section, imperatively tal Releigh, in an address to Jacoes the first, that demands that the court should be increased, and the demand of the sovereign upon the Commons we hope it is not too late for the house of Renfor pecuniary aid, was intended only "That the tax might seem to come from themselves, whereas the inference is, it was really laid by the severeign himself." With that modesty and propriety which mark, in a yemorable manner, this letter of fren. H., he has refrained from illustrating there positions by the citation of any of the numerous instances that have occurred in the legislation of this country, within a few years past. Newburyport and Newport, sea board towns, bwe much of their present prosperity to manuhe has so ably presented. It is this : that, in factures. - As their commerce declined, factoorder to restore the administration to its original ries have sprung up to take its place, and give employment to their population. Something of this kind is wanted bere. Let the experiment be tried no, we will not call it an experiment, erament to become the source of Legislation; for others have tried it and have not failed. The business, properly conducted, would certainly succeed it could not fail, with any sort of good management. We should have all the advantages of other peoples' experience to make it, until they have assumed that perfected shape the attempt doubly sure. Not only would it be for the interest of every individual who resides in the community, but it would benefited ... Real estate, ranta and lahur would all rise. Emigration would be to us, in stead of from us. Every body would have an interest in the success of such an undertaking Let the business be begun, and the most sanguine expectations will be realized. The own-ers of real estate here, could well afford to give outright one per ecut of their property to hegin the business.

Our commerce is fast leaving us. Something is wanting to supply its place. The capital invested in whating vessels, had it been employed in manufacturing establishments, would now have paid a handsome per cent .- Manufacturing will fill up the vacuum made by diminished and diminishing commerce, and will supply a sure and profitable business. The attempt cannot tail of success.

IF S. J. COURT We regret that the house of Representatives should have indefinately postponed, the bill providing for an additional Judge to the Supreme Court. The Legislature think nothing of incorporating new counties and establishing new and Alditional terms, and we should suppose the State was bleased with an omnipresent court, and capable of fulfilling every duty. The population, business, contracts and suits, have all more than doubled, and we cannot conceive why it is, the bill is opposed. | have learned from averal sources shield can be killed upon, and the correctness of which I cannot doubt, the facts in regard to the rearon of Mcintyre and others going to Fitzherburt's where they were captured, and the cause of Strickland's slarm and retreat: It seems that the greatest amount of trespassing was upon the Little" Madawaska river, and you will see, by referring to Buckmore's report, that there, were 78 men; with 20 yoke of value and 20 page of horses, engaged on this river in cutting lumber. These men had information of the movements against them, but not in season to escape with their tead ... As Strickland and his crew passed down the Arcostook, and by the mouth of this river, these trespossers kept a spy out, and seeing that their only hope of escape was, by driving Strickland back, they selected two of their number, one of them a Yankee, to go over to the Tobique settlement, and contrive some means to get themselves and their teams clear. Phose two men phahed by Strickland, and gave the word to Dow and others that McIntyre and his companions had gone to Fitzhehert's to sleep rested satisfied with the arrangement entered for the night. Dow pushed of and made them into with Mr Fox for preventing any violent prisoners. The Yankee thereupon pushed up to Strickland's camp, about half past II o'clock and then determined upoil sending a special at night, and represented himself be shrender. Analysiander to Digland, all would be se been son in law of Fairbanks, an American, who re- well, and the mission might have been attendsides on letter D. 7 miles from fitzlierbert's He told Strickland that in half an hour or before 12 o'clock he would be attacked by a force of ing to Great Britain, and is one to which she 300 men, including three companies of regulars, 70 militia and 50 Indians. Strickland ordered us men under arms, for feer of ar-attack in the woods, marched them on to the river, where they remained exposed during a severe wight, and at the first appearance of day they put themselves in preparation for a retreat. -- Rines desisthe others. Strickland had too much regard for the safety of the men, and would hear no such proposal. The Yankee told them he must clear for home, for if they caught him with them they would shoot him at once. Strickland put his force into double quick time, and without givng them time to eat or drink pushed back for home, and at the mouth of the Presque lale ho took the fleetest horse and was never more seen by the men till his return a few days ago. The trespassers slipped down the river, and in a trice were out of harm's way. The Yankee got full credit for his success, and the men, tho' broken up in their business, all went safe. Strickland reported to the Governor, and he communicated to the President, that there was a force of Three hundred men and all well armed! opposed to him. You will perceive this, by referring to the Governor's second message, dated Feb. 15. It has already appeared by the statements of Messrs Mointyre, Cushman, Bartlett, and by those of McLaughlan, Tibbette and many others, that the whole force of the trespassers did not exceed 50, and that only 15 or 20 had arms at all. The people of the Province are not allowed to have arms in their possession, and these were some they stole from the arsenal at Woodstock... These are the facts which will be confirmed by Capt Rines, Capt Parrott, and all the menunder Strickland's command at the time, as far as they have the means of knowing. The raseal who frightened Strickland is called Jackson, I believe, and is much talked about by the Provincials for his cool impudence and courage.

THE BARBER OF DUNSE. A gentleman possessing an uncommon share of wil an humor, had occasion to lodge, for the night, in company with some friends, at the inn of a town which for certain reasons we shall denominate Dunse. Requiring the services of a baiber, he was recommended to Walter Dren, who was replaced to an nor only skilled in that profession, but excellent at cracking a joke or telling a story. This functionary being forth-with introduced, made such a display of his oral and manual dexterity, as to leave on the mind, as well as the body of his customer, a very favorable impression, and induced the latter to invite him to ait down to a friendly glass. The circulation of the bottle tended to show off the barber in his happiest mood, and the facetious gentleman amid the general hilarity thus addressed him: 'Now Walter, I engage to give you a guinea on the following terms: that you leap backward and lorward over your chair, for the space of half an hour lessurely yet regularly crying out at every leap, there goes I Walter Dron, barber of Dunse; but should you utter any thing else in the time specified, you forfeit the reward.'

Low spirits is a certain state of the mind, accompanied by indigestion, wherein the greatest evils are apprehended upon the slightest grounds, and the worst consequences imagined. Ancient writers supposed this disease to be confined to those particular regions of the abdence technic. eight or left side of that vavity, whence comes the name hynochoodriasis.

Symptoms. The common corporeal symptoms are flatulency in the stomach or bowels, acrid eructations, costiveness, spasmodic pains, giddiness, dimness of sight, palpitations, and offen an utter in-ability of fixing the attention upon any subject of importance, or engaging in any thing that demands vigor or courage. Also languidness; the mind be-comes tritable, thoughtful, desponding, melancholy and dejected, accompanied with a total derange-ment of the nervous system. The mental feelings and peculiar train of ideas that haunt the imaginarinn and overwhelm the judgment, extribiten infinite diversity. The wisest and best of men are as open to this affliction as the weakest.

CAUSES. A sedentary life of any kind, especially severe study, protracted to a late hour in the night, and rarely relieved by social intercourse, or exercise, a dissolute babit, great excess in eating March 5, 1839.
